

Call For Proposals

*philo*SOPHIA is an international, interdisciplinary peer-reviewed journal of feminist philosophy, theory, and creativity. Established in 2008 and “*trans*Continentalized” in 2018, the journal biannually publishes cutting-edge scholarship that extends the rich traditions of transformative feminist interventions and socio-political engagements. Actively connecting and creating divergent feminist approaches, cultures, genres and histories, *philo*SOPHIA seeks to cultivate discursive alliances especially but not exclusively with critical race, disability, literary, media, and queer studies. While most of the content comes from open submissions, we also welcome proposals for guest-edited special issues and symposia, which will be reviewed by the editors and members of the advisory board.

For Guest-Editing

Please email your ideas for the topic or theme with a sample CFP and your CV(s). All submissions for your special issue will go through a double anonymous review process.

For Special Symposia:

Please email a description of the concept, a table of contents, contributors’ short bios, and your CV(s). All submissions will go through a double anonymous review process.